Constructing Fantasy Realms: Language, Lore, and Landscapes

COURSE OUTLINE

Constructing Fantasy Realms: Language, Lore, and Landscapes is a full year course where students will explore fantasy literature as a genre and critique the three Lord of the Rings films. The Lord of the Rings is one of the most popular stories in the modern world. In this course, students will study the movie versions of J.R.R. Tolkien's novels and learn about the process of converting literature to film.

COURSE OVERVIEW

J.R.R. Tolkien's "Middle Earth" is a rich world steeped in historical, mythological, theological, and philosophical references and allusions. In this course, students will read The Fellowship of the Ring, the first book of J.R.R. Tolkien's The Lord of the Rings trilogy. Students will study the life of Tolkien and the "history" of the world he created. This includes reading other works of fiction and non-fiction by Tolkien, as well as commentary on Tolkien from other scholars and authors. Activities will include watching films, making food (lembas, anyone?), drawing/sketching, and creating our very own "worlds." Students will maintain a reading journal, engage in Socratic seminars, write short stories, take quizzes, and present a final project on a subject of their own choosing.

PREREQUISITES & CO-REQUISITES & TARGETED STUDENT POPULATION

COURSE CONTENT

Unit 1: The Man Behind the Movies

The Lord of the Rings is one of the most well-known books of the past century and has been translated into many languages. Now that it has been made into a trilogy of major motion pictures, the story has gained an even greater following. In this unit, students will learn more about the author of the novel and how the book came into being. They will explore The Hobbit, which acts as a prequel to The Lord of the Rings. In addition, students will explore the background of some of the major races and characters in Middle Earth and how they impacted the story, especially in The Fellowship of the Ring.

Students will be able to:

- Discuss the cultural impact of The Lord of the Rings.
- Report on J.R.R. Tolkien, the author of the book.
- Discuss the writing of The Hobbit, the prequel to The Lord of the Rings.
- Give an overview of the basic story of The Hobbit and understand its connection with The Lord of the Rings.
- Outline the first part of The Fellowship of the Ring.

- Recount details about the characters in The Fellowship of the Ring.

Unit 2: The Languages of The Lord of the Rings

One of the elements that makes The Lord of the Rings so unique is the lengths to which the author went to create a world that seems real. One of the most interesting elements is the creation of the various languages used in Middle Earth. However, the creation of these languages is far more than an afterthought; it's truly the foundation of Middle Earth. In this unit, students will learn more about these languages and about Tolkien's role as a philologist at Oxford University. As we discuss the second part of The Fellowship of the Ring, students will explore the role that language plays, not only in Middle Earth but also in their world. At the end of the unit, students will watch Tolkien, a film that focuses on the First World War as a formative event in Tolkien's life.

Students will be able to:

- Discuss Tolkien's career as a philologist.
- Develop new vocabulary related to the study of language.
- Explore the evolution of the English language.
- Analyze how the creation of the Elvish language impacted the creation of Middle Earth.
- Outline the background of The Lord of the Rings as it appears in the second part of The Fellowship of the Rings.

Unit 3: The Influence of the Arthurian Tales

The ideas behind The Lord of the Rings come from many literary sources, all of which were familiar to a classically educated English man living during the first part of the twentieth century. One of those sources was the tales of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table. Even today, these stories play an important role in modern entertainment, as the number of related movies, television shows, and books demonstrates. A basic understanding of the legends of King Arthur helps to properly understand some of the concepts in The Lord of the Rings. In this unit, students will examine the basic Arthurian story and explore in depth the tale of Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, a Middle English poem translated by J.R.R. Tolkien.

Students will be able to:

- Retell the basic story of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table.
- Develop a new vocabulary related to the study of King Arthur and the period in which the stories were set.
- Discuss Tolkien's scholarship as it relates to the stories of King Arthur and Sir Gawain and the Green Knight.
- Explore the story of Sir Gawain and the Green Knight.
- Describe how the concepts in the stories of King Arthur impacted the creation of The Lord of the Rings.

Unit 4: Converting a Classic to a Film

Many great works of literature have been converted into movies over the past century. Great classic stories have an enduring appeal that translates well into multiple media. Converting a story to a movie offers a lot of advantages and often reaches a wider audience. But this transition also has disadvantages. In this unit, students will learn more about the way that The Lord of the Rings was converted into a film and how this change has affected the story.

Students will be able to:

- What will students learn in this unit?
- Describe the process of converting a book to a film.
- Explore the advantages of presenting a classic book as a film.
- Outline the advantages of reading the story in book form.
- Explain how the movie changed some elements of this portion of The Two Towers.

Unit 5: The Heroic Culture of The Lord of the Rings

Though Middle Earth is an imaginary world, its social and political structures are drawn from the ancient roots of Western civilization. In this unit, students will learn about some of these conceptual roots, particularly those that affect the changing views of war and heroism, such as the concept of the ancient epic hero and the medieval system of comitatus. Students will also appreciate how these ideas are presented in The Lord of the Rings. In addition, they will learn about the more modern ideas that are expressed in The Lord of the Rings, such as conservation and ecology. Finally, students will explore some of the complex character relationships that are revealed in this portion of The Two Towers movie.

Students will be able to:

- Describe the heroic feudal culture of comitatus.
- Explore how this heroic concept is developed in The Lord of the Rings.
- Define the concept of the epic hero.
- Discuss the concept of the epic hero as portrayed in The Lord of the Rings.
- Analyze how Tolkien used The Lord of the Rings to express his own views on conservation and ecology.
- Discuss character development in The Two Towers.

Unit 6: Beowulf, the Monsters, & The Lord of the Rings

Before Tolkien wrote The Lord of the Rings, he had already established a reputation as one of the foremost Beowulf scholars of his day. At that time, Beowulf was regarded mainly as a historical document that baffled historians by its fantastic references to monsters and impossible feats of heroism. Tolkien's scholarship and landmark essay "Beowulf: The Monsters and the Critics" changed the way that the world viewed Beowulf. As a result, the story of Beowulf has gained significance in our age, even hitting movie screens in several recent adaptations. Tolkien also drew important lessons from his study of Beowulf, which greatly impacted his fantasy writings. In this unit, students will learn more about Beowulf and its influence on The Lord of the Rings.

Students will be able to:

- Discuss the background of the epic poem Beowulf.
- Describe features of Old English poetry.
- Outline the story of Beowulf and its view of heroism.
- Explain Tolkien's view of the value of monsters in fantasy literature.
- Analyze how Tolkien's scholarship concerning Beowulf affected the writing of The Lord of the Rings.

Unit 7: Mythopoeia: The Making of Fantasy Worlds

J.R.R. Tolkien and a few others of his generation became actively involved in creating fantasy worlds, complete with their own mythology and sets of rules. Now, fantasy worlds spring up on bookshelves on a regular basis. In this unit, students will learn more about the genre of fantasy literature and why Tolkien defended its use for a teen and adult audience in his famous essay "On Fairy Stories." students will also explore the differences and similarities between fantasy and science fiction and discuss the advantages of fantasy literature as seen through the mind of J.R.R. Tolkien. In addition, students will learn more about the background material of the first half of The Return of the King.

Students will be able to:

- What will students learn in this unit?
- Describe some of the genres of literature.
- Discuss fantasy literature and its relation to science fiction.
- Define mythopoeia.
- Discuss Tolkien's famous essay "On Fairy Stories" and the advantages of fantasy that Tolkien described in that essay.
- Outline the background material of the first half of The Return of the King.

Unit 8: Journey's End: The Final Analysis

In this unit, we will end our Quiz of The Lord of the Rings. But first, students will learn how the ending of the book varies in many ways from the movie. Students will trace the major themes of the movie and how they played out in the end. Students will also discuss characterization in depth and discuss the elements of plot. And students will examine how the quest has affected many of the characters in the story since the beginning of the journey and where this journey took them in the end.

Students will be able to:

- Describe the themes and motifs in the movie.
- Discuss conflict in a story and how this adds interest to the tale.
- Define the differences between dynamic and static characters.
- Compare the differences between the book and movie versions of The Return of the King.
- Discuss more about the basic elements of plot development.

- Outline the development of all the major characters in the story and where the story took these characters even after the film was finished.

Culminating Assessment:

Students will create a project of their choosing to show the elements learned throughout the unit. Students may create a physical presentation, a PowerPoint, a screenplay, fan fiction, or artwork. This final project will include a reflection of the contrast between the films and the written works.
